Course Title: Sustainable Solutions for Sectional and Rolling Doors (removed)

Course Number: AEC933 (AM-EN-93303-1219)

Course Description: Can commercial overhead doors contribute to the sustainability goals of buildings requiring garage, drive-through, fire, dock, and service products? To meet these goals commercial sectional and rolling doors should be engineered to provide energy efficiency, personnel protection, and to mitigate fire and wind damage. This course examines the sustainable attributes of commercial overhead doors and explores their design potential in LEED® compliant projects.

Learning Objectives:

Assess the green milestones that can be achieved in building product manufacturing, materials, packaging, shipping, delivery, and supplier processes.
Recognize the sustainable attributes that architects should look for when specifying commercial sectional and rolling overhead doors.
Identify the LEED categories and points where commercial doors may contribute to making your projects more sustainable.
Explore the design potential for commercial doors by studying an award-winning LEED Gold project.
